Mr. Howell lived with his wife and five 12 m. own at Warrensburg. He was the pastor of a church about six miles north of that place. William Henderson owned a big farm and stock ranch near the church. In March, Howell conducted a series of revival meetings at the church, and during the time boarded with Henderson. Mr. and Mrs. Henderson "got religion" and joined church during the revival. A strong attachment sprung up between the preacher and Mrs. Henderson. About April 1, Howell sent his wife and five children back to Illinois to visit relatives. They are still there. Shortly after Howell started out on the road to sell school furniture.

About April 1 his home at Warrensburg was burned, and he returned to fix up the insurance. The insurance companies were somewhat suspicious, and concluded to investigate the case before paying the loss. Howell immediately left. Mrs. Henderson left her husband and little child the same day. It was learned later that she had joined the preacher and that they were touring the country in the vicinity of Carthage. Henderson supplied himself with a brace of revolvers and started in pursuit, threatening to kill the preacher on sight. The authorities at Warrensburg took hold of the case and succeeded in locating the pair at Oswego. The Kansas authorities were notified and arrested them. Henderson was at Webb City yesterday, looking for his wife and her paramour. Sheriff Koch was disappointed to-day when he learned that he could not get to Oswego until to-morrow. He was afraid that Henderson would hear of the arrest and would go over to Oswego and kill the preacher before the sheriff got there. Koch says that Howell owns a big furm near Warrensburg, and was always regarded as a sincere preacher. He also says that the burning of Howell's house is looked upon with much suspicion.

OUR BLUE-EYED GUNNERS.

torney DeWeese to Account for Their Accuracy. "It takes men with blue eyes to shoo well in the navy, so I have been told," said

Attorney Kenneth DeWeese yesterday, in talking with some friends over the wor done by the navy at Santiago.

"I remember," he continued, "a few years ago when young Mr. Winram, of Kansas City, who is in the navy, was affairs connected with the handling of the big guns on the warships, and during the talk told me of the gunners with blue eyes. He had no explanation for it save that experience had demonstrated that blue eyes were more trustworthy on the water and that for long distance shooting black eyes that for long distance shooting black eyes were defective.

"The Spaniards are a black eyed nation and the Americans are not, and from the way the shooting was done at Manila and the other places where our men have done work and the glorious manner in which the work was done by the gunners on Sampson's fleet causes me to quite agree with the statement that men with blue eyes shoot exceptionally well. The Spaniards with their black eyes appear to be defective and quite inaccurate."
